A commentary on the experiences of the writer during a three-year term in Beijing as the Australian Broadcasting Corporation correspondent. Helene Chung is a fourth generation Australian of Chinese descent. She spent time in Beijing between 1983-1986 (a period of significant social and economic change in China). The book provides an easy to read account of the growth of consumerism, modernization of the economy and a partially-relaxed open door policy under the leadership of Deng Xiaoping. A useful and topical adjunct for history units and the Chinese history component of the Chinese Language syllabus. Upper Secondary.
